“Making the decision to go from in house to hosted was big for us,” said Jeff Thompson, CEO of Blue Eagle CU, which performed their data processing internally prior to signing with the technology CUSO, “WRG has been very responsive through the conversion process. Our experience with WRG has reassured us of our decision to partner with them to host Corelation/KeyStone, our new core system.”

“Our KeyStone-based service bureau offers a breadth of system infrastructure, process efficiency, and expertise that you cannot match anywhere else,” said Dave Cerwinski, Vice President of Sales and Client Services at WRG, “In our relationships with our new clients, we look forward to applying our expertise, and collaborating together to help them make the most of their technology investments.”

Service Bureau users will also be able to automate and outsource daily processing to WRG’s computer operations and support personnel, who are available 24 hours a day and 365 days a year.

One credit union, Long Beach City Employees FCU, went live with WRG’s service bureau on November 6, 2017. Four other credit unions who signed with WRG this year will go live in 2018.
